balance. To this affecting story Mr. B. replied by mail that he would not move in the matter, (probably fearing that an imposition was about to be practised upon him) unless the girl was sent here herself. This was consented to on behalf of her master, by the girl giving him her parole of honor, that in case of a failure to raise the sum necess ry, she would return to him. Will sail for the above port on Wednesday, Sept. 3d, Mr. Beecher then in an affecting manner alluded to For freight or passage, apply to the respect due to woman, whether she was bond or free, educated or uneducated, and concluded by in- N. She was scarcely as dark as an Indian, and had a pleasing an intelligent countenance. Her appearance upon the speaker's stand, evidently much disconcerted before such an immense assemblage of strangers, and fearing no doubt that the much needed money would not be raised, so exci- 0. II. GULICK, Master, will leave Honolulu, regularly for Lated the congregation, stirred as their feelings were by hains and Kahului, every MONDAY afternoon, and returning the preceding remarks of the speaker, that the hot tears streamed down the weather-beaten countenances of strong men as well as the softer cheeks of beau-tifulwomen. The officers of the church then passed around the plate, and although the congregation had no previous knowledge or expectation that there would be such a demand made upon their benevolence, they were rapidly filled. Several gentlemen near the pulpit intimated to Mr. B. that they would be responsible for For freight or passage apply to any short coming in the collection, and that he might relieve the girl of suspense. This he did, but it also reached the ears of the congregation, who, in as great suspense almost as the girl herself, forgot the sacred character of the day, and gave vent to their joy in a loud clapping of hands. Mr. Beecher, remarked that he did not approve of the clapping of hands in the church on the Sabbath, but as the deliverance of a slave from bondage was a proper occasion for joy and gladness, he would be content to call it "a holy clapping of hands." The sum contributed was seven hundred and seventy-five dollars, besides several articles of jewelry, which ladies unprepared with money had cast into the plates. We understand that the girl has a child, and that the surplus funds collected are to be applied to the purchase of its freedom, and to aid the young woman in settling herself at some useful occupation here at the North .- N. Y. Journal of Commerce.
